Rebuilding Bermuda Aviation History

Again another to week have passed no work happened last week because I was away

But that doose not stop the news being exciting

When we left this great story we had just put the wings on and so with some sadness we took them back off again

But all in a good Cause as the fuesalage was taken out side and pressure washed to get ride of the remaining dirt

And with all good washing we have to hang it up to dry

Ok I admit it it was so that we could slide the floats underneath to se how we could secure the floats back onto the struts as a few key components are missing

And once again another milestone has been reached

A trip down to our local hard ware store should yield some item to be welded together to make the supports attach to the floats (lucky were not going for FAA approval) Not on this one anyway but more about that next week

Looking for a special volunteer to make repairs to the V strut and make new controls

The fun continue next

Saturday from 2.00 pm please let me know if you will be attending

Cheers Frank
